Reconciliation as a state of mind
It begins within oneself as a personal, subjective experience. Reconciliation is a first step towards peace, order and justice. The awareness of the value of reconciliation enables us to act with foresight, to connect and to find synthesis between supposed contradictions and conflicts.

The S.E.R. Foundation is an NGO with special advisory status at the UN ECOSOC (Economic and Social Council), also associated with the UN DPI (Department for Public Information). One of its global commitments is to foster reconciliation and peace.

UN Volunteerism: Magnanimous Diplomacy in Action

The challenge of the millennium is how to mobilize organized civil societies into cohesive and concerted peacekeeping networks.

The 64th UN NGO/DPI Bonn Conference with Volunteerism as its Theme underscored the significance and relevance of human magnanimity in the pursuit of international peace, brotherhood and equality.

Executive Coordinator of the UNV, Flavia Pansieri aptly puts it: “Sustainable Development cannot be achieved without Responsive Citizens who commit, volunteer and engage!”

Political Scientists and Thinkers have repeatedly said: „The greatness and success of a Nation, depends in greater and lesser degree, upon the character and magnanimity of its people.”

Here lies the key to Global sustainable development: Human Magnanimity, high-mindedness and understanding.

In other words, organized governments and NGOs should work together in enhancing the level of conscious activities geared towards the pursuit of the supreme ideals of Life, Liberty and Dignity.

As the Good Book, says: “Without Vision a Nation Perish.”

What started as a dream early February 2007 came into reality four years later on 3-5 September 2011 in Bonn, Germany, the UN City in Germany: “The 64th Annual UN DPI/NGO Conference“

On instruction of the Chairman of the S.E.R. Foundation UN Affairs, Mr. R. V. Tajon, a delegation composed of Ms. Josefine Brecht, Judge Felicitas Hoffmann and Katharina Brecht sought an audience to the then UN DPI NGO Chief, Mr. Juan Carlos Brandt, with Ms. Isolda Oca, as go-between, a UN NY Officer, to bring the Annual UN/DPI Conference to Germany.

The 64th Annual UN DPI/NGO Conference, outside the UN New York Headquarter, was a most challenging job for the organizing committee and for the S.E.R. Foundation. In the planning committee was the Media/PRO Office, Ms. Josefine Brecht.

The Conference was attended by about 1,500 NGOs, CSOs, UN Member States Representatives, Media, Academia, various associations and foundations world-wide.

The Conference Theme “Sustainable Development” attracted societies and responsive private individuals in all fields of endeavors, particularly those involved in sustainable developmental projects, environmental protection, Poverty Eradication, Health Care, Youth and Education Projects.

In the aegis of the 10th Anniversary of the International Year of Volunteerism (IYV + 10) Roundtables, Workshops, Exhibits, Youth Events, Side Events and Interactive Programs were scheduled.

The Host City Government of Bonn, represented by Mayor Jürgen Nimptsch and Dr. Maria Hohn-Berghorn, together with the BMZ, Federal Government of Germany, UN DPI/NGO Committee Group, UN Volunteers, Conference Planning Committee Chair, Felix Dodds, Co-Chair, Bernward Geier, to name a few.

The S.E.R. Foundation also organized events: under its Reconciliation and Health Care Program:

The Reconciliation Award Ceremony, a Workshop to Strengthen Civic Volunteerism and an Exhibit: Power of Empathy Through Ergosoma. City Bonn Mayor Jürgen Nimptsch says: “... the claim on the conference website is intriguing – commit, encourage, volunteer...” There is not much to add to that. But what I can say is that a functioning society depends on the degree to which its people commit and volunteer...”

In pursuance to the S.E.R. Foundation’s Reconciliation “Action Plan 2009,” enunciating various special awards that shall be granted to NGOs world-wide, on their exemplary local humanitarian projects and activities, the awards for 2009 and 2010 were recently handed down in simple ceremonies in Bern, Switzerland and Bonn Germany.

In cooperation with Global Balance Foundation, the Action Plan was designed to foster Reconciliation Diplomacy under the theme: “Unity in Diversity“ to support the United Nations (UN MDGs ) Millennium Development Goals.

As conceived, the 2009 Action Plan calls for all Civil Organizations to initiate Projects promoting reconciliation and peace.

In August 2010 the 1st S.E.R. Reconciliation Award Ceremony took place with 157 projects from 22 nations had been registered on the occasion ushering the United Nations’ International Reconciliation Year 2009. 12 projects were awarded in the presence of the guest of honor, Mr. Wilfried Lemke, the United Nations Secretary-General’s Special Advisor on Sport for Development and Peace, in Bern, Switzerland.
The 2nd Reconciliation Award Ceremony on September 4, 2011, as a Side Event of the 64th annual UN DPI/NGO Conference on 3-5 Sept., in Bonn Germany.

Many participants found their way to the great Beethoven Hall, where on Sunday evening the award ceremonies was opened solemnly with a musical contribution of Ms. Dorothy Habig, S.E.R. UN NY Representative, who sang a ballad, with Klaus Roth at the piano.

Ms. Felicitas Hoffmann, S.E.R. UN NY Representative, in her welcome address, warmly welcomed all, particularly the Director of the Outreach Division of DPI, Mr. Maher Nasser, the keynote speaker and Guest of Honour, Mr. Kevin Gilroy, Chief of UNV Peace Division, Ms. Verena Schwarte, Representative of the Town of Bonn, Mr. Bernward Geier, Head of the German Focal Group, Mr Cyril Ritchie, President of CoNGO as well as its former President, Mr. Liberato Bautista.

In his keynote speech, Mr. Gilroy portrayed the importance of the commitment to reconciliation and peace and paid tribute to the work of the S.E.R. Foundation.

The Presiding Chairman, Managing Board of the S.E.R. Foundation Germany, Prof. Dr. Stanislaus von Korn, described objectives and targets of the S.E.R. Foundation’s engagement and thanked all attending organizations for their commitment.

The granting of the awards was launched through a musical improvisation of two voices, by Bettina Marugg and Steffi Schmid. More than 70 projects from 16 countries had been registered on the website of global balance. A jury of the S.E.R. Foundation had chosen the following 4 projects as best practise in 4 categories.
These Four Projects were presented successively by the Jury Members. The representatives of the organizations obtained the S.E.R. reconciliation award, which was donated by Global Balance. In their acceptance speeches, it was very moving to hear how much Joy and courage this recognition has brought to the projects’ staff.

In her closing remarks the moderator, Ms. Felicitas Hoffmann, extended special acknowledgments to all those who made the ceremony possible, the Chief of DPI NGO Relations, Ms Maria-Luisa Chávez, the representatives of the City of Bonn, the head of the DPI NGO Executive Committee, Mr. Jeffrey Huffines, to the German coordinator of the Conference, Mr Bernward Geier and the co-chair of the event and exhibition subcommittee, Ms Josefine Brecht.

In their final song, Bettina Heuel and Steffi Schmid invited the audience to sing along and have refreshments and drinks afterwards, that enhanced for everyone into joyful and cheerful mood.

Steffi Schmid
Today we live in a time of unrest. Political, economic, ecological and social problems and changes determine our world. But at the same time it seems to be a time of renewal - perhaps more than in the past years. A time where peace and reconciliation are of particular importance.

But we have to consider that peace and renewal also require a sustainable balance at several levels. Keep in mind, that nowadays

- consumption is not linked to resources
- economy is not primarily linked to human values
- education and professions are mainly shaped by rational understanding, not by a holistic approach
- people are trained in using weapons, not in peace-building and that
- we should not promote the war between cultures, but find new ways to bring cultures together.

So, we have to look for a higher level of understanding, which unites us.

And I believe that we all – especially in the free and favoured world – bear some of the responsibility for a sustainable peaceful development – in accordance to the topic of this year’s 64th DPI/NGO conference ‘Sustainable societies, responsive citizens’.

The S.E.R. Foundations from Germany, Switzerland and the Netherlands promote these goals and for many years our foundations have been engaged in peace and reconciliation projects. - In 2003 the S.E.R. Foundations drew up a resolution for a Reconciliation Day: “The 2009 International Day”.
- From 2005 to 2008 it invited NGOs worldwide to participate in a Reconciliation Week and
- when the International Reconciliation Year 2009 was proclaimed by the General Assembly (in November 2006), it introduced a Global Action Plan for the year and set up a general call for joining in reconciliation activities’.

All members of the S.E.R. Foundations work as volunteers, and it is encouraging to see how many volunteers all over the world are working for peace. So I think, there is a potential for peace-building and reconciliation, that we must use and strengthen.
On our way to a more stable and peaceful world, we also have to make sure that the personality development will be supported and that empathy—as it is promoted by the Ergosom Method—will achieve greater attention in human relationships.

In this context, a consciousness of the principle of sharing can grow that seems to be indispensable for a balanced (stable) world. (Some first steps have been taken in the U.S. and Europe (such as donation service, taxes on the rich).

Today we need a stronger collective responsibility. Therefore, it is necessary, that our attitudes will change for a new level of understanding. A large number of reconciliation projects can be taken as examples for that.

To some of them we would like to award a prize today.

We want to keep the idea of reconciliation alive and to preserve it in the mainstream of human consciousness. Therefore S.E.R. and Global Balance Foundations are renewing the call to submit reconciliation projects every year and more over, we believe that it is indispensable to call for a Global Reconciliation Decade by the UN member states. The longer reconciliation is practiced, the more harmonizing effects will develop at different levels even up to the promotion of the Millennium Development Goals.

Reconciliation is the heart of the UN Peace keeping dialogue to foster enduring global peace and understanding!

Thank you
Today, we live in a time of unrest. Political, economic, ecological and social problems and changes determine our world. But at the same time, it seems to be a time of renewal – perhaps more than in the past. A time where peace and reconciliation are of particular importance.

First, it is worthwhile to consider the broader meaning of reconciliation – and the “subjective experience” which the S.E.R. Foundation advocates as essential for any meaningful reconciliation to be realized. Second, to bolster the recognition of volunteerism and civic engagement within the context of local and global reconciliation and peace building efforts...

The 4 Awardee projects, and the special people behind them, epitomize - precisely - the type of committed, engaged and responsive citizens we’re speaking about – people whom out of free will and volunteer spirit, have stood up, joined and partnered with others, and took action to do something to make the world around them a better place.

It is an added privilege to speak on behalf my organization - the United Nations Volunteers, as we at UNV can think of no better fitting Award to be highlighted and recognized in the midst of the theme and spirit of this conference – that Sustainable Development cannot be achieved without Responsive Citizens who commit, volunteer and engage!

Now and so that all of here better understand the Awards being presented this evening, and what power they represent to the larger theme of the Conference, I thought it would be interesting to focus my words on two areas. First, it is worthwhile for us to consider the broader meaning of reconciliation - and the “subjective experience” which the S.E.R. Foundation advocates as being essential for any meaningful reconciliation and sustainable development to be realized. Secondly, I would like to indulge you in considering some of the trends and opportunities that we in the UN and at United Nations Volunteers see, and what we are doing to bolster the recognition of volunteerism and civic engagement within the context of local and global reconciliation and peace building efforts.

What I find fascinating about the S.E.R. Foundation - and the responsive citizen nature and spirit of the Awards being presented tonight - is the S.E.R.’s more holistic take on reconciliation. The Foundation applauds higher-level diplomatic reconciliation efforts, yet also sees reconciliation as a fundamental principle for human development at all levels of society, not just the high and diplomatic. That reconciliation comprises all areas of our lives and humanity - in our environment, in our economy, in our religion and faith, in the cultural, social, scientific, and political realms of our lives and communities. And most importantly, that reconciliation starts with us as individuals, and is inter-twined and spreads though our families, neighbours, communities, and workplaces, with rippling effects and inter-connectedness, and direct impact on the well-being of our society at national and global levels.

Key to this more holistic view of Reconciliation, is the belief that it can only truly happen through personal, subjective experience – experiences that spawn greater openness, acceptance, understanding – inner, personal experiences which bring balance in perspective and heart of the individual, and relationships that individual has with the people and community around them.

In simple terms, the way I understand it, is the belief that true reconciliation in all walks of our lives, cannot happen unless we as people experience our own transformative changes within ourselves. The experiences to effect this change do not come from above, but rather at the individual, family and community level – often in small, gradual transformative steps – but steps that can make mighty powerful footprints as they grow and inter-connect with others in society.

The winners of this year’s Reconciliation Awards have clearly demonstrated how common citizens connect the dots between sustainable development and civic engagement. Reconciliation within the context of sustainable development is an herculean challenge that needs a herculean response, and only through engaging every citizen of the world is the challenge to be met.

We at the United Nations Volunteers, and all the organizations and everyone here tonight, salute you, salute your colleagues and partners back home, and salute the incredible work you are doing!

For editorial reasons this is a condensed form of Mr. Gilroy’s speech.
During the 64th DPI NGO Conference in Bonn, Germany, the S.E.R. Foundation sponsored a workshop, titled:

It was moderated by Ms Anke Bruns, S.E.R. Foundation Germany. Who welcomed as speakers Ms Colette Samoya Kirura, former Ambassador of Burundi to the UN and Peace-Woman, co-founder and coordinator of the NGO BANGWE and DIALOGUE, Mr Alex G. Elsohn, Director of Europe from the Givat Haviva Educational Institute (Israel) and Ms Doris Röschmann, S.E.R. Foundation Germany.

Ms Röschmann, a German Psychologist focused on the motivational and psychological aspects of volunteerism. She featured the importance of being motivated by a higher purpose in voluntary work, self-knowledge and self-realization, on prerequisites of responsible deep rooted engagement. In order to win volunteers, she said a clear mission and vision are fundamental: Mission target should be positively forward oriented.

Ms Colette Samoya Kirura referred to her experiences in the Great Lakes region where despite ongoing conflicts, the societies also inherit universal values like dignity, the ideal of peace and basic Human Rights in their respective traditions to resolve conflicts. She pointed out and explained in detail, how she could motivate women of the Great Lake region who had suffered violence to turn their passive observance into active change favoring reconciliation and sustainable peace and how children were trained in non-violent communication in order to live without revenge.
Mr. Elsohn talked about his experiences with promoting mutual responsibility, civic equality and cooperation between divided groups in Israel. Focusing on the Bedouin minority living in Israel, he revealed the consequences for not officially acknowledged Bedouin villages being cut off public service like water, schools and transportation. It is the engagement of his NGO to encourage young people to take responsibility for their daily life, empower their capacities to create relationships, voluntary engagement and structural changes within the communities and negotiate with local governments.

In the interactive part of the workshop, the attendants got together in small groups and exchanged their personal experiences referring to the vision for the voluntary work, on the greatest inner strengths and how these contribute to their voluntary work as well as on the assets out of the voluntary work.

For the given period of time, the bright and ample space of Salon Hayden hummed with dialogues.

The workshop concluded with a very vivid discussion between the audience and the panelists.

Workshop on UN Volunteerism
64th DPI/NGO Conference, Bonn, Germany
Conducted by Ms. Doris Röschmann Council Vice-Chairman, S.E.R. Foundation D

I am honored to participate in this workshop and to speak over a subject that interest me most:

“Volunteerism for a New World Order”

Let me start about the Motivational Aspect of Volunteerism, an act of performing a Task without financial reward or monetary profit.

Experience has shown certain precondition upon which one volunteers: to give meaning to one’s work or being.

Furthermore, whether one finds meaningful reason for working or not, depends primarily on the person self.

Studies have shown that there Two Conditions for finding one’s meaningfulness: (1) an attitude of Self-Responsibility. (2) an Optimistic Attitude.

Self-knowledge is necessary for selfless acts. Most religions and philosophers worthy of their names emphasize self-knowledge or self-awareness as an important condition for helpfulness. They teach that one gains self-knowledge by way of reflection, contemplation and action.

The way is by gaining ample experiences: (a) of being useful; (b) of being successful; and, (c) of being self-efficient. These experiences lead to the feeling of optimism and confidence that also gives added inner strength and self-reliance.

Studies further showed that to appeal on people’s sense of responsibilities brings only little impact; to enhance subjective experience have more sustainable effect. That is, altruistic activities and civil engagement are ways to gain good feelings not for a short moment but fortifies enduring happiness and well-being in life.

Let me mention at this point the importance of visionary attitudes for NGOs by speaking over my personal experience as volunteer.

The S.E.R. Foundation Germany have a mission-statement as follows: “Protecting human life is a sacred duty; upholding human dignity is a sublime mission to fulfill.”

Every time I read these words, written by our Foundation Chair, Romulo Tajon, they awake longing and wish to follow this purpose. I want to contribute and help people find their uniqueness in building a community where everyone can flourish.

This becomes my personal mission. Others, too, can find their own way. And, whatever motivation that may be, there is a common aim: reconciliation, building bridges to overcome differences. Above all, to preserve God’s Creation under a regime of peace, justice and freedom.

I appeal to all concerned and recommend to NGOs to attract people for a sustainable engagement – (1) by defining clear and authentic mission; visions that generates common goal, hope and encouragement, creative thinking and passion. (2) To define and describe these missionary statements in positive terms.

Let us all strengthen a New World Culture by saying: “Yes we will.”

Doris Röschmann
The Foundation for Subjective Experience and Research S.E.R. exhibits participation at the UN DPI/NGO Conference covers (1) Eradication of Poverty through Sharing under the teaching of St. Martin; and (2) under Public Health Program by Ergosoma.

The S.E.R. Foundation’s Group was headed by Dr. Markus Köhl, together with the Ergosoma Health Care Team. Their topic: “Power of Empathy for a Sustainable Public Health and the St. Martin Philosophy of SHARING in eradicating Poverty and Hunger.” In short: the UN-Vision for a New World Order.

The Project Sharing, as St. Martin teaches, is to eradicate poverty through socio-economic and political reforms designed to uplift human value, dignity and equality geared towards a better world order.

The bronze statue at the exhibition stand was created by the artist and peace maker Uwe Brecht.

It depicts the children of the world, each representing the Elements of Nature necessary for living, i.e. water, air, sun and Mother Nature; and, in the other hand, the shared value/wealth of St. Martin connecting them all.

Since children are most receptive and ready to revere nature and its treasures without greed, they represent the future. They stand on a marble plinth, as models of quality of life abundance, as depicted by a well running in spiral form.

Sharing as a magnanimous form of reconciliation is an ethical social value: it fosters humanness in social development and economic stability. The development path, in the form of a spiral, from the past to the present, the children as link, in translating the virtue of sharing natural resources in peace and justice, so everyone living and building a new World of Peace; as symbolized by the Dove - with Mother Earth in the middle.

ERGOSOMA IN PUBLIC HEALTH –
A clear mind and intuitiveness, where sensory awareness, feeling and rational thinking in a state of “oneness” are the way towards high-mindedness: Magnanimous character.

Scientific studies show that the Ergosoma Method, a new therapeutic healing art, fosters high sense of perception and empathy.

Ergosoma, when used in Global Health Care services, can be a complementary healing method. Founded and developed by R. V. Tajon, its roots can be found in the healing traditions of Ancient Asia.

Ergosoma professes, that every person has an inborn self-healing mechanism. It is a self-regulating and regenerating inner core. It has indigenous resources that are all integrating, regulating and transmitting vitality impulses.

Sustainable social health development needs mutual power source: An Organized Civil Society, where the sublime power of perceptual Empathy as tool for public health and well-being can be utilised.

Reconciliation in Action: Global Campaign for Sharing

Due to the report on Poverty Eradication, released by Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, one main factor of poverty is inequality in the distribution of the benefits of globalization and access to resources.

To stimulate voluntary, unconventional, groundbreaking actions of the beneficiaries of growth, the S.E.R Foundation proposes to launch a campaign for sharing within the Second UN Decade for the Eradication of Poverty.

Sharing enhances stability, social cohesion and peace, as expressed in the sculpture overleaf. The sculpture indicates the developing path of mankind, represented in the form of a spiral. The new World of Peace is symbolized by the dove on mother earth in the center of the sculpture of the artist Uwe Brecht.
of the world’s children - all its inhabitants – who share their resources (in their hands). St. Martin on horse incorporates the principle, action, dynamism and dignity of sharing.

The S.E.R. Foundation since 2009 has called for a Global Reconciliation Decade

The Baltic Sea Forum`s programme and the S.E.R. Foundation`s Reconciliation Diplomacy

At a personal meeting with H.E. Mr. Mutlaq M. Al-Qahtani, PhD, Ambassador, Chef de Cabinet, Hanifa Mezoui, PhD, Special Coordinator Third Committee and Civil Society – both Office of the President of the sixty-sixth session of the United Nations General Assembly and Kurt Bodewig, Katharina Brecht and Josefine Brecht discussed the Baltic Sea Forum`s programme on implementation of the UN MDGs, which attracted great interest, in addition

Kurt Bodewig, H.E. Dr Al-Qahtani, Katharina and Josefine Brecht
Mr. Bodewig’s subject and multi-layered view on “Solving the piracy-problem in Somalia” considering the reasons and minding the people who are involved and the specific issues of society the pirates emerge from.

Subsequently, the S.E.R. Foundation in a very cohesive way related to its Reconciliation Diplomacy Programme with main focus on the implementation of MDGs, on the S.E.R. Reconciliation Award and the call for a Reconciliation Decade. These basic approaches found very positive response and great interest by the representatives of the General Assembly.

In a follow-up meeting with Ms. Hanifa Mezoui the possibility to register not only S.E.R: Reconciliation projects, but also high-level persons of politics, economics, etc. that pursue S.E.R. Reconciliation
Diplomacy was discussed.
With this impulse the S.E.R.
Foundation broadened its award categories with the Award for Global Mediation Diplomacy. With this Award persons or organisations of public life will be honoured for their exceptional dedication to global reconciliation and mediation.

Reconciliation as a state of mind

It begins within oneself as a personal, subjective experience. Reconciliation is a first step towards peace, order and justice. The awareness of the value of reconciliation enables us to act with foresight, to operate connectively and to find a synthesis between supposed contradictions and conflicts.

The S.E.R. Foundation

The S.E.R. Foundation is an NGO with advisory status at the UN ECOSOC (Economic and Social Council), also associated with the UN DPI (Department for Public Information). One of its global commitments is to foster reconciliation and peace.
